Sheets of missiles dew through what seemed a moving mass of smoke; human valor was power-less and the death-dealing guns were everywhere throwing blazing projectiles in their faces. No troops could advance and live. The fiery onslaught was re-pulsed as Pickett's division had been, and then the survivors of both came back to their former positions, but not one-half of the fourteen thousand. The amous charge was over. "This has been a sad day to us," said Lee, "but we cannot always expect to win victories." It was a day for the South, for at that time it was "within a stone's throw of peace." Fate was against Lee. The high-water mark of Southern independence had been reached, and from that hour it began to ebb from the mountains of Pennsylvania until lost in the hills of Appomattox. "It is all my fault," Lee exclaimed, and proceeded in person to rally and re-form his shattered troops. "There was much less noise, fuss or confusion of orders than at an ordinary field day; the men were brought up in detachments, quietly and coolly," said an English colonel who rode by his side. What that wonderful magnanimity the right, after the early hour Longstreet's command got near Lee's head quarters, cannot be wholly laid at the oor of his guide - Lee's engineer officer, Colonel S. P Johnson. That officer states he called attention to the fact that the road they were following would pass over a hill in view or the Federal line, and pointed out a shorter route across a field screened from observation; road, and followed it to the top of the hill, then halted, and changed the posi-Early and Pendleton, he told Governor Carroll, of Maryland, "that the battle

Royal Baking Powder Co.,

Last Tuesday may prove to be in the end a Democratic victory. The down-fall of the Republican party will come from the very conditions upon which it now wins It will be seen, in the course of time that many statements made by the Republicans were largely false, and that their gain of last week was due to misapprehension occasioned lead by unconscionable demagogues t think that hard times have been due to last nor can the Republican party.

To-day the Democratic party stronger and better organized than it was a week ago From the defeat o last week will come a renewal of courage and faith which will re-unite th broken forces into a column of solid and honest Democracy. Neither boast nor trickery will be in it, but sound judgment and firm adherence to Democratic principles will control it Good, honest. patriotic men will lead it Principle must be its aim, not office.

When the Republican party goes down, as it will on account of undue office grabbing, the Democratic party must go up, if it will consolidate on right principles. OFFENCES BLLATING TO ELECTIONS.

A number of occurrences during the last campaign indicate a condition of politics which must be repugnant to a conscientious voter or candidate It is Cumberland, an open secret that a certain amount of money or some article of value has liter ally bought the votes of, not what are called ignorant people only, but of men whose appreciation of right and wrong ought to be well developed. We have knowledge of certain men of fair stand ing offering one dollar or more per head and insisting upon voters accepting the amount. We have knowledge of 'heelers" offering so much whiskey for a vote for certain candidates Certain letters have been sent to candidates demanding money for the support of the writers and threatening opposition In justification of these misdoings it is said that such are the ways of politics as they are. If so, the ways are wrong and Adams, need correction It seems that some politicians, and their benchmen, have forgotten or do not know or do not care for the law Whatever the case the law is being openly broken, and too often with the knowledge of candidates, some of whom If men cannot be law abiding citizens

Eltysburg Compiler WILL NOT ACCEPT $30,000. THE TROLI EL COMPANY APPEALS AND TAKES EXCEPTIONS

The attorneys representing the Lietric hailway Compary yesterday took an ap-peal to the United States Circuit Court mpensating the company to the extent of $30,000 for the taking of land by the Government The Trolley Company con tends that the award is madequate and -- In interesting rectival is in progress desires that a jury of twelve shall pass up in the Methodist church has Carver on the matter in Court

Exceptions were also filed for the Troi les Company In these it was submitted that the taking of the Trolley Company land is not authorized under the act of luguet, 1888 as there is nothing said thout condemnation of property belong mg to private persons. It is also stated that the strip of land sought to be con demined is over 6 000 feet in length, and is an integral part of the right of war of one or the branches of the road, and that the effect of its condemnation would be to cut the branch in two destroy its continuity Petersburg va, to work at the jewelry and prevent its further operation. The acts of Congress, it is urged, were not in tended to authorize the Secretary of War

Harriet I Talinestock, in Watertown S Dakota, to Mr Marwood R Baskerville to procure for the United States by con demnation any land which had been al eady devoted to a public use A number of other reasons are given why the condemnation of the land shall the return not hold good and it is asserted that a

-- In Dry Goods, Notions, Carpets.

For several weeks pust we have been advertising in every paper in the county, (that we thought would do us any good,) almost nothing else but LADIES' COATS AND FUR CAPES. We don't want to give the impression that we are an exclusive coat and cape store to those not acquainted with us We desire, however, to say here, that our stock and assertment is large enough to run such a store, our sales in this department are large enough to support such a store. We have the stock, and right prices, right make, right fit, right styles—which is the why that we are doing a larger coat business this season than we ever did before, notwith-tanding the continuous cry of hard times. We are happy in saying that this October's business excels almost any we have ever had. We must push forward We will not stand still. This November must be the banner November. How are we going to do it when it takes a former dollar and a quarter's worth to count a dollar now? Do it like we made October business larger—first have the gods -have them at the right prices-when there is a drop in the market, drop with it, sell no goods that are not honest, treat everybody fanly, let the advertising tell people what to expect and don't disappoint them. We have a bit of news here now that is interesting

We Have a Bit of News Here now That is Interesting. We male a little round recently among the best coat makers in cities where there is no strike among cloak makers, we placed orders with those who had the clo h in store and which was bought when depression in wool stuffs was lowest. These cloaks are arniving now-the prices are what they should be, based on the lowest prices ever known for materials. They are arriving not as fast as we want them but we must be satisfied as plenty of dealers cannot get them at all. There is ro advance for November as many are now paying because of labor strikes and scarcity of matenale Our success in coat selling makes us liberal

We might tell another bit of news in reference to some new dress goods, picked up in the same trip. Also of some new prices picked up on some previously bought and in stock-our prices always drop with the market. We cannot tell here all the price or store news about dress goods-it will pay you to come to ree us Lots of new things

Another bit of News-New Silks with new prices -lower than you or we ever knew them. It will pay you to c me to see us, no matter what you want in the Dry Goods or Carpet way.

"There is no doubt that the robin and the 'cherry bird' pay a higher price to the farmer for his fruit than he can get in the open market, or that the owls render services far more valuable to the farmer than the few chickens they consume. Specialists, such as poultrymen or small fruit-growers, may suffer unduly at times, but they are generally fully capable of protecting their own in-"The general farmer will do well to offer all possible protection to birds, for in so doing he will materially benefit his own fortunes."

The advice contained in the last sentence is applicable to all sections of the country.

Onions are the most easily cared for of any of the small agricultural industries, says a correspondent of Prairie Farmer. Nor is there a vegetable that would fill its place in the economy of the house. It conduces to health, stimulates the appetite and in many ways ren ders itself useself. Great care should be exercised to prevent the onions from being bruised in the handling. In gathering them they should not be suffered to fall upon one another or the ground.

"Insect Life," an interesting publication of the Agriculture Department, explains the cause of the russet color of the Florida oranges and the curious results on their quality of the insect which causes this discoloration. The oranges are attacked by a minute insect, a mite that burrows in the skin and by destroy ing the surface of it bardens it and makes it inpenetrable by the air. This has the effect of greatly increasing the sweetness of the juice, and renders the fruit less subject to injury in shipment and by decay. Thus the so-called russes oranges are most popular in the market and much desired by the consumers. And yet, curiously enough, the orange growers are constantly asking the department how to get rid of the mite which thus does a valuable service to

All wounds that are noticed on fruit trees ought to be attended promptly and carefully, just as in the care of animals, and proper remedies should be applied, says a correspondent of American Gardening. Broken limbs should be removed by a fine sharp saw, and the bared surface thickly covered with a thick ochre paint; the wound thus treated will heal much more quickly and soundly than if let alone. Very early its existence a young tree may get what not enough to merely plant trees—that is an operation which goes but a very little way in the establishment of an orchard to be depend upon for reguar and reliable crops of good, merchant-

The black knot does more damage to plum growers than the curculio. The curculio may be successfully fought by spraying early in the season and by jarring the trees, but the black knot not only destroys the trees, but spreads over the entire neighborhood. Any tree that is badly affected should be dug up by the roots and consigned to the flames. and any appearance of the disease on a tree should be the signal for vigorous cutting away of the parts attacked. The Red Astrachan's mission is twofold-to furnish an early fall cooking apple and a fruit from which the most delicious jelly can be made. All who have used this fruit for cooking purposes are familiar with the strong quince flavor that is developed by cooking. In the production of jelly the Astrachan gives the same strong flavor, and also a most desirable jelly as regards consistency and clearness. The Sweet Bough is not the best of our sweet apples by any means, but is still a useful addition to one's fruit garden because of its early ripening and its beautiful appearance.-

A Southern fruit-grower says he keeps the rabbits from his trees by an application of soft soap thinned to the consistency of buttermilk, one gallen; of coal tar, one pint ; enough Venetian red, dry, to thicken to the consistency of paint. He applied it with an old paint brush from the collar to the first limb.

Every farmer should understand horticulture. It enables him to grow a lar ger variety and to rotate his crops to the best advantage. There is no reason for confining the farms to three or four crops. The soil will be improved when the same crop is not grown oftener than one year in five. Small fruits should be grown as well as grain and vegetables.

This is a rotation which will pay well. Live stock is our chief reliance in mantaining the fertility of the soil. While the raising of stock will enrich our soil and renew its productiveness, it will market the farm products better than to ship the feed away.

Feeding the stick just navely close food to keep them from losing flesh is a food to keep them from losing flesh is a in the fall. Cattle that have been running on pasture will need good rations from now on, and the sooner they can be gotten in good, plump condition the better it will be for them. Get the cattle in prime order to commence the winter and then feed liberally enough to keep them so. After cold weather has once set in the poor cows-the thin ones-will require heavy feeding if they are good milkers to get them in good condition. It requires less food for a cow that is moderately fat, or what is called "it good order," than a thin one in winter and their yield of milk is richer and treater. It pays to keep the cows plump at all times, and if there is one among the herd that it is quite impossible to her, for she is unprofitable. It costs no more to keep a good cow that pays than to keep one that is an enormous eate and never pays for her food. Those who make the dairy a business often have cows to sell. These cows are always these that do not pay, for the dairyman rarely has too many good paying cows. Raising your own helfer calves is one of the best ways of getting together : number of good cows. Saving the helfer calves from the best coas is the way to nake proper selections. It is a mistaken idea made by many good farmers to let their cows run out on the pasture and meadow fields until long after cold weather has come. The cattle do not find much nourshing food, and their owner overestimates what they do get and withholds rations they should have. They tramp the grass unnecessarily.
